The nonprofit group Reach Out recently celebrated the grand opening of its new Jurupa Valley Resource Center.

The center will offer a range of community resources, a news release states.

Its services will include:

- Housing and utility support
- Mental health support
- Substance-abuse prevention
- Violence prevention
- Employment and workforce development
- Family health and wellness
- Youth education and empowerment
- Financial literacy and education
- Immigration services
- Translation services

Those attending the Thursday, March 23, ribbon-cutting event toured the facility, enjoyed music, a food truck, face painting, a balloon artist and opportunity drawings. A Community Health Systems/IEHP mobile vaccine unit gave COVID-19 vaccinations, booster shots as well as flu shots.

Guests at the event included Jurupa Valley Mayor Chris Barajas, Mayor Pro-Tem Guillermo Silva and Councilmember Leslie Altamirano. Also attending were representatives from the offices of Rep. Mark Takano, D-Riverside; state Sen. Richard Roth, D-Riverside; Assemblymember Sabrina Cervantes, D-Riverside; and Riverside County Supervisor Karen Spiegel.

The center is at 8300 Limonite Ave., Jurupa Valley
